Boys Learning Principals of Self Support.

Superintendent Needham Satisfied With Experiment—One Result Noted.

For the past nine years, or ever since I have been connected with this institution as its head," said Superintendent Needham to a reporter of the Advertiser in conversation with him at the Reformatory School yesterday afternoon, "I have tried to get some kind of a workshop here for the boys, but not until within the past two months have I succeeded in moving the Government to give us what we have so long needed.

"I realize the fact that funds for such purposes are very short, and we must put up with what is given us. I cannot tell you how thankful I am on behalf of the boys under my care, that we have at last a place, small indeed, where we can give them an insight into the use of tools which must needs be of use to them when they sever their connection with this institution."

With this Mr. Needham took a bunch of keys from a large drawer in his office and walked over to the workshop, a small one-story frame building, directly makai of the main building. This is composed of two rooms, each 20x20.

The mauka of the two was the first entered. "This," continued Mr. Needham, "is the tinning room, where the boys are now being taught by Mr. D. F. Sanford how to cut tin.

"The main object, you understand, is not to teach the boys the tinner's trade, but to instruct them in the use of tools. When they leave this institution they are more apt to get positions if they are handy.

"It is just a beginning that we are making, but we are trying to make this beginning as strong as possible.

"The short term boys are, of course, not included in those who work in the shops, for obvious reasons. The long term boys who come in here when they are very young and leave when they are practically men, are the ones after whose interests we are looking. It is not fair to turn them loose upon the world with no prospects of making a living. Yet that is what has already happened and what we hope to obviate in the future.

"Just now we have only three or four of the long term boys employed at the tinner's bench, since a greater number would not give such favorable results. The time of the instructor must be given to a few if good is expected.

"Here, you see, we are rigging up a harness bench, where we expect soon to place some of the boys. Its purpose, of course, is the same as the tinner's bench."

The makai room, connected with the mauka one by two doors, was next entered, and in speaking of this Mr. Needham said:

"Previously the boys have had no special place set apart for doing their mending. They have had to put up in the best manner possible with the dining room, the school room or even outside under the trees when the weather happened to be good.

"Now it is a different matter. Every Friday the boys congregate here and wash their clothes and bedding. On Saturday they iron them, and then everything is ready for the new week. At present we have no stove to heat the irons in here, but that I shall soon arrange for."

Over against the wall were two lockers where, Mr. Needham explained, the boys kept their Sunday clothes and any other articles which they wished to be especially careful of. A space of 18 inches square was set apart for each of the 40 boys belonging to the institution.

One thing was particularly noticeable about the two rooms which constitute the work building. Each is supplied with two very large sliding windows, which admit a large amount of light and air, two very necessary elements for people at work indoors.

The carpenter shop in one of the old buildings was the next visited. Although this is an old thing at the Reformatory School, still additions in the way of tools and improvements in other small ways are being made for the benefit of the boys.

"There are two young Hawaiian fellows, one from Oahu and the other from Kau," said Mr. Needham, "who show a special aptitude in carpentering. They are both long term boys, and one has been here for four years. Whenever any repairs have been made here they have been called in to assist, and in this way have learned a great deal more than they could have by simply remaining in the shop and doing work by themselves.

"There is another Hawaiian boy, Moses Victor, of whom I wish to speak. A short time ago, Mr. Ganzell was out here doing some carpentering work, and the native I speak of, was sent out to assist. He showed such readiness that Mr. Ganzell was moved to do something for him. Through efforts in this young man's behalf he was let out on parole, and is now making his $1.50 a day.

"That is what we want to do with all the long term boys we send away from here. We want this institution to be a help as well as a punishment to them. Really, what is this but an education institution?"

Mr. Needham then gave the following outline of the daily life at the institution:

From time of rising until 8:30 o'clock, work.
From 9 a. m. until 12 m., school.
From 12 m. until 1 p. m., dinner and rest.

From 1 to 3 p. m., work.
From 3 to 3:45 p. m., large boys to school and small ones continue work.

At 4 p. m. all work ceases and at 5 p. m. supper is served.

From 5 p. m. until dark, play.
On Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, evening school takes place. This course was found necessary on account of the large number of boys from various places at the institution, some of whom have had no education at all.

There is only one teacher and all have to be reached.
In concluding his remarks about the Reformatory School, Mr. Needham expressed the hope that the needs of the institution be brought before the public more and more from time to time, and that in the near future, better facilities for work be furnished the boys.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

Convention notes from St. Louis report that the W. C. T. U. had 1,175 new unions organized last year. The receipts were $26,706. Sixteen million children are under scientific temperance instruction; ten thousand enrolled in Bands of Mercy; thousands more in Loyal Temperance Legions and Anti-Cigarette Leagues; physical education adopted by the National Board of Education; millions of pages of temperance literature distributed; tracts given to 640,000 minors; victories for Sabbath observance; fifty new unions of colored people; raising of the age of protection in Ohio, Louisiana and North Carolina; striking advances in the suppression of impure literature; progress in railroad work and in the beautiful mission of the flowers; great activity and demand for the services of the sixty state and national evangelists; all these are among the telling points gleaned from the reports of officers and forty superintendents.

DESERTED WIVES IN KANSAS.

What strange things, exclaims Harper's Weekly, one hears about Kansas! Topeka, a city of about 35,000 inhabitants, is credited with having over 400 deserted wives, who appeal to charitable organizations for work or help for themselves and their children. A charitable society which is quoted as the source of this statement attributes the state of things of hard times "and the general worthlessness of the men." Matters are made worse by the frequency of divorce, which is cheap and abundant in Topeka, on easy grounds. It was in Topeka that the Kansas Equal Suffrage Association met on November 12th and decided to ask the State Legislature to grant to Kansas women the right to vote for President. The association announced that it had grown tired of begging for favors, and proposed to become a lively factor in Kansas politics—as if there was any factor in Kansas politics that was not lively!

According to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, President-elect McKinley will probably have two of the handsomest horses ever seen in Washington. The late Gen. Joseph T. Rensselaer, of Chicago, possessed as fine a stable of horses as was owned in the Windy City. It was the General's intention before his death that two magnificent brown horses, the best matched pair in his stables, should be presented to Mr. McKinley to ride behind to the Capitol on Inauguration day, in the event of his election. The General left no written will to this effect, but it is said that his daughter, Mrs. Magoun, who has come into possession of the estate, will probably carry out her father's wish and present the horses to the President-elect, and that they will take their place in the White House stable on the 4th of March.

Rev. H. W. Peck was given a surprise party by the members of the Methodist church last evening.
